The Thanksgiving Ceremony:

New Traditions for America's Family Feast

By Edward Bleier, Crown Publishers, 2003

Book Reviewed by Susan Fogg Eisdorfer

When our youngest son was in third grade, his teacher asked my husband and me to help with the class Thanksgiving project; it turned out to be a complete turkey dinner with all the trimmings. I was a bit taken aback with the scale of the endeavor, but gladly complied, for after all, my fore-mother, Eleanor Billington, was one of those four surviving married women who played a major role in pulling off that first one in 1621. If she could do it, so could I and besides, there were not the original 90+ guests - only a mere 30 or so. The experience was an eye-opener for me because some of my son's classmates and parents had never even tasted turkey before and had never experienced an American Thanksgiving ever. Now I understood the reason why this teacher had chosen to stage such a quietly grand event and it was a wonderful thing for her to do. It was not only an event of community sharing, but also an introduction to one of the most quintessential American holidays. The experience made me think.

A number of years later I saw a quirky little film called "Pieces of April" which explored the meaning of Thanksgiving and community in ways that were to me upsetting, funny and very poignant. It provided a definite challenge to those who see the Holiday only in terms of turkey and football.

There is nothing wrong with turkey and football; my quibble is with those who never go any deeper. This is where Edward Bleier's book comes into the picture and it is a welcome addition to the scene.

Bleier offers a model for a participatory Thanksgiving ceremony and feast that seeks to draw all present into a truly celebratory community. In all it takes about twenty minutes and is incorporated into the mealtime itself. Although the Holiday draws upon the experience of our Pilgrim ancestors, including George Soule, Thanksgiving did not become a national holiday until Lincoln designated it as such during the terrible days of the Civil War. A Thanksgiving in the middle of a war? Yes.

It drew people together, it honored the bounty of the harvest season and it recounted times of hardship when keeping faith in the future and in each other mattered greatly. And when do these things not matter? Never. They always matter. Sometimes we need to be reminded and need to initiate the young or those from another place to the meaning of the Thanksgiving table and holiday. Just as each takes some corn or turkey or pumpkin pie, each takes a turn with a reading that illuminates the

Dawn L. Soule

A Mass of Christian Burial was held from St. Vincent's Church on Thursday (March 29) for Dawn (Hill) Soule, 48, of Kansas City, Mo., formerly of Eden, who died on Wednesday, March 21, 2007.

Mrs. Soule is survived by her husband, Robert R. Soule; son Darrell Soule; daughter Alicia Soule and brother Harold (Carolyn) Hill, Jr.

She was predeceased by her sister Jacqueline Hill and brothers Richard and Gary Hill.

Mrs. Soule was a past member of the Eden Memorial VFW Women's Auxiliary.

Interment is in Immaculate Conception Cemetery and arrangements were made through Laing Funeral Home.

Dawn Soule was the Daughter-in-Law of Kindred Board Member Norman Soule'

story and our relationship to it. At the end there are songs sung together before the meal concludes. Participants are invited to make entries into a journal of the day's experience as a way of building memories that can be re-shared in other years by the same and new participants, thus building upon the meaning of the day. Some will say that this draws from the model of the Seder and they are right. It works. Try it.

ONCE UPON A TIME IN AMERICA

by Tony Storey

A Healthy Business

Asa Titus Soule was born in Duanesburg, NY on 2 August 1824 and lived through some of the most turbulent years in American history. As well as the political differences between the northern Union and the southern Confederacy culminating in the Civil War, still the largest loss of American lives in any conflict, there was also the contrast between the east and west of the emergent nation, one developed, civilised and law-abiding, the other undeveloped, untamed and lawless.

Asa Soule was the eleventh child of a Quaker family and given his beliefs it is unlikely he played an active part in the Civil War. He tried his hand at farming, fruit growing, banking and hotel management, but it was only when he was well into his forties that he decided to buy a patent medicine business, Doyles Bitters, in New York. Asa changed the formula and rebranded the products, having some initial success with Dr Soule's Balm Syrup and Soule's Hop Cure for Colds and Coughs. In 1873 he moved the plant to Rochester NY where it became the Hop Bitters Company.

Asa Soule had a real talent for marketing,

Last summer we ran a re-print about Asa T. Soule that was sent in by one of our readers. This article captivated our British cousins at Soul Search, the journal of The Sole Society. Tony Storey decided to do more work on the life and times of Asa and wrote this piece. It was published in their August, 2007 issue. Here it is for your enjoyment. Sharing the Season's Bounty

Here we are again just going into the Autumn season with trees starting to turn from green into glorious color. The harvest is coming in now and it is time to share recipes from readers for the soon to follow Thanksgiving feast. Let's get cooking.

Stuffed Celery Mim Fogg

As with many handed down recipes, this one endures with out specifics, but goes basically like this: take a bunch of celery and separate the stalks; trim ends, wash, pat dry with a paper towel and put aside.

Allow a large brick of your favorite cream cheese to sit on the counter until softened. When ready, place the cheese into a mixing bowl and add enough juice from a jar of pitted, stuffed olives to create the right consistency (which means whatever consistency you like). You may also use a couple of teaspoons of sour cream or milk, if you prefer. Chop a half cup of pimento stuffed olives into a medium-fine mince, then do the same with a half a cup of plain roasted walnuts. Combine all ingredients in the bowl except the celery. Season to taste.

Take each stalk of celery and fill the cavity with the olive/walnut mixture using a small spoon and table knife or two knives (each family finds its own solution to the problem). Mound the mixture gently into each stalk and continue filling until you run out of stalks or mixture, but rarely both at the same time.

Place the filled stalks on a tray and refrigerate until ready to serve. Prior to presentation, cut the stalks crosswise into two inch pieces with your sharpest knife. Arrange on a pretty platter and offer as an appetizer or at the table.

Pumpkin Indian Pudding

Anon Y. Mous

1 cup cooked pumpkin purée
1/2 cup coarse yellow cornmeal
1 cup water
3 + 1 cups milk
2 large eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup dark brown sugar
1/2 cup light corn syrup
1 3/4 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
1 tablespoon sweet butter
1 pint heavy cream

Pre-heat oven to 325 degrees and lightly butter a 1 1/2 quart baking dish.

Pour cornmeal and water into a sauce pan mixing well. Add 2 cups of milk and the salt; on a medium setting, heat slowly and stir constantly until the mixture is thick and without lumps. Take off the burner and add butter, spices, sugar and syrup and stir. Add the pumpkin and egg; gently combine all ingredients and pour into the baking dish.

Bake for 30 minutes, remove from the oven and pour in the remaining cup of milk without stirring. Return dish to the oven and bake for another 1 1/2 hours until thick and nicely browned. Serve warm with a small pitcher of heavy cream on the side. Serves six and is a nice alternative to pumpkin pie.

The Medley Mash

Susan Fogg Eisdorfer

4 large potatoes, peeled/cut
2 large carrots, peeled/cut
1 small rutabaga, peeled/cut
1 big yellow onion, peeled/cut
2 tablespoons butter
light cream
salt/pepper to taste

Boil vegetables in lightly salted water, roughly 20 minutes; test with a fork for doneness. Drain water and place vegetables in a mixing bowl; add butter and hand mash or use an electric mixer. Add cream during mashing until the mixture is thick, but easily spooned. Season to taste. Serve hot with gravy as with regular mashed potatoes.
Serves 6-8.

Paducah Never Fail Cornbread

Judith Hughes

1 cup buttermilk
1 cup cornmeal
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon sugar (optional)
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1 egg

Pre-heat oven to 425 degrees. Mix ingredients and pour into 8" or 9" iron skillet pre-heated with 2 tablespoons of bacon drippings, Bake 25 minutes. Given to Judy by her grandmother Mildred Loving Soule Coolidge Harmon.

A Quick Autumn Soup

Jane Macey Merrill

4 cups cranberry sauce
5-6 cups cooked tomato dice
zest of 2 lemons
crème fraîche or sour cream

Combine cranberry sauce and tomatoes; heat until hot, but not boiling; simmer gently for 15 minutes, stirring often. Serve hot or cold, garnished with crème fraiche and zest.
Serves 8.

Mushroom, Scallion and Wild Rice Casserole

1 cup wild rice, rinsed and soaked in water for 1/2 hour and drained
Place the rice and the following ingredients into a double boiler:
1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
1/4 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 cups boiling turkey stock
Cover and cook using low/moderate heat in double boiler for 45 minutes or until tender. Remove from heat. Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees; butter a 1 1/2 qt. baking dish. To a warmed frying pan add:
1/4 cup of butter or margarine, heat until bubbling
1/3 cup well chopped scallion
3/4 cup roughly chopped fresh mushrooms
salt/pepper to taste
Sauté until all is lightly browned and most of the liquid from the mushrooms is evaporated. Combine mixture with rice and pour into buttered dish, dot the top with additional butter and bake for about 30 minutes. Serves 4.

composing all his own advertising slogans and making outrageous claims for his mixture of bitters, hops and alcohol:

*“Have you dyspepsia,
kidney or urinary
complaint, disease of the stomach, bowel, blood,
liver or nerves?
You will be cured if you use
Hop Bitters!”*

Realising that baseball was growing in popularity, he bought a baseball club, and in a very early example of sports sponsorship he renamed the team Rochester Hop Bitters and the sports ground Hop Bitters Park. He even made sure that the players were given a dose of his elixir before every game but the substance appears not to have been performance-enhancing! The team finished bottom of the league and was eventually expelled.

Another of his remedies, Soule's Panacea, had been selling well in the Rochester area but began to lose out to a rival product, Warner's Sake Kidney and Liver Cure. Warner had gained a lot of publicity by sponsoring the local observatory but Soule's attempt to upstage him by offering to fund the University of Rochester was turned down. Frustrated by this rejection and the difficulty of buying more influence in the established towns and cities of the east, Asa decided to use his vast wealth to start his own town and exploit the opportunities presented by the new lands in the west.

Way Out West

Kansas had been shown on old maps as the Great American Desert, but by the 1880s it was being touted as a one of the best prospects for settlement and investment in the United States. The government was selling land in west Kansas very cheaply and Asa saw his opportunity.

Now reputedly the richest man in western Kansas, he used his wealth to establish the town of Ingalls and competed with other towns in the area for new investors and more settlers. It was common for these new communities to exaggerate their town's qualities over their rivals, citing such factors as soil quality, proximity to water and to the new railroad. Asa Soule, however, was prepared to use his vast wealth to add substance to Ingalls' claims.

In 1882, Asa purchased the nearby Dodge City waterworks and founded the Eureka Irrigating Canal Company with the intention of diverting the Arkansas River into a 96-mile canal through Gray and Ford Counties. The canal took two years to complete but the erratic flow of the Arkansas River often failed to fill it, and what water there was seeped away through the porous sandy soil. Fortunately for Asa, he managed to recover his investment by selling bonds to a group of English investors. The canal soon became known as 'Soule's Folly' but the promise it once held to 'make Kansas bloom like a rose' had attracted hundreds of settlers to the region, flooding in to establish farms and businesses. Small clusters of habitation grew into townships seemingly overnight and at the height of the boom the population in some parts of Kansas grew by 500 per cent in a single year.

Each county was to have a county seat, the administrative centre where the council offices and court house would be built, thus helping to ensure the town's future prosperity. It was essential to Asa Soule's plans that Ingalls found favour with the voters of Gray County. However, the nearby town of Cimarron was also in Gray County and, having been first settled in 1878, four years earlier than Ingalls, Cimarron held the early advantage. To persuade voters to support Ingalls' claim to be the county seat, Asa Soule, now president of the Dodge City First National Bank, promised to build a sugar mill in Ensign, a city hall in Montezuma and gave forty acres of land in Dodge City to establish Soule College, which opened in 1888. Asa also announced the building of his privately financed Dodge City, Montezuma & Trinidad Railroad.

Bad Medicine at Cimarron

Asa Soule had every expectation that all his new projects would persuade voters to choose the town of Ingalls as the county seat. When on 31 October 1887 Ingalls lost the election despite his substantial investment, Soule discovered that Cimarron had fraudulently purchased a number of votes and he obtained a court order to delay the result being ratified. However in summer 1888 the court records were removed to Cimarron and in a further election in November 1888 both towns claimed victory. After months of seemingly inconclusive legal wrangling, Soule lost patience and decided to hire a group of mercenaries to raid the courthouse in Cimarron and return the court records to Ingalls, thereby giving further legitimacy to Ingalls' claim to be the rightful county seat.

Dodge City had sprung up five miles from Fort Dodge on the Santa Fe Trail and for three years it was the centre for the trade in buffalo hides. Once the buffalo herds had been slaughtered, the town earned a living from the longhorn cattle being driven along the Chisholm and Western Trails. Fort Dodge closed in 1882 and the last of the big cattle drives was in 1886 but at the start of 1889 Dodge City still had a fearsome reputation. Men brought up in the tradition of the 'Wild West' could be hired on a daily basis as enforcers in circumstances where a gang of armed men might be more persuasive than a piece of paper. Asa Soule could afford to hire the best.

Bill Tilghman was born in Fort Dodge, Iowa in 1854. A buffalo hunter from the age of 15, he opened a saloon in Dodge City, Kansas in 1875, scouted for the US Cavalry during the Cheyenne raids of 1878 and served as deputy sheriff under Bat Masterson from 1878 to 1884. Jim Masterson, born in 1855, was the younger brother of Bat Masterson, the professional gambler, friend of Wyatt Earp and marshall of Tombstone. Also a former buffalo hunter, Jim was marshall of Dodge City from 1879 to 1881, when he was relieved of his duty and ordered out of town after shooting a man. Fred Singer, Neal Brown, Ben Daniels, George Bolds and Ed Brooks were also in Asa Soule's pay, most being former lawmen, renowned gunfighters and members of the infamous Dodge City Peace Commission. Soule must have expected the people of Cimarron to surrender the court records without a shot being fired.

On the morning of 12 January 1889 Soule's gunmen rode into Cimarron with the intention of seizing the documents, by force if necessary, and taking them to Ingalls. They reached the courthouse and held town clerk Riley at gunpoint, demanding he hand over the records. Riley played for time and when eventually the gang began to load the documents onto a wagon, they found themselves surrounded by an estimated 200 Cimarron townsfolk armed with Winchester rifles and shotguns. Shots were exchanged and some of Soule's men sought refuge in the county clerk's office, which was on the first floor over the grocery store. The Cimarron mob then entered the store and fired into the ceiling to flush out the gunfighters. In the furious gun battle that followed, a prominent citizen of Cimarron, John Wesley English, died and a score of others were wounded. Soule's gang fought a desperate rearguard action in which some of them were badly injured before throwing down their weapons.

Having lost the battle and perhaps the moral high ground too, a disillusioned Asa returned to Rochester to launch the Hop Bitters Company's latest product, Soule's Absolute and Irresistible Cure for the Liquor, Narcotic and Tobacco Habits. Asa Titus Soule died in Rochester NY on 17 January 1890, barely a year after the infamous gunfight at Cimarron, and is buried in the Butler-Savannah Cemetery, Wayne County NY.

Epilogue

After the battle of Cimarron, the Kansas Supreme Court ruled that Ingalls was indeed to be the county seat, but in the following years drought hit the region and without the financial backing of Asa Soule the town of Ingalls faltered and many of its people left in the hope of better prospects elsewhere. Cimarron's settlers stayed to ride out the storm and a special election in February 1893 returned the county seat to Cimarron. In the decades that followed, Cimarron thrived while the town of Ingalls stagnated and slowly declined Advances in medicine eventually undermined the market for patent medicines like Hop Bitters and for all his ambitious schemes there are few reminders today of Asa Soule's colourful life. The Dodge City, Montezuma and Trinidad Railroad was never really a success but the embankments that carried the track remain. From certain points on US 50 sections of the Eureka Irrigation Canal can still be seen by the Arkansas River. Soule College changed hands several times before its destruction in 1942 by a tornado. It was rebuilt as St Mary of the Plains College but closed for good in 1992.

There is little doubt that the Gray County Seat War would never have taken place had a self-made millionaire from the east not tried to manipulate this part of Kansas for his own aggrandisement.

Perhaps the most poignant memorial to Asa Soule's influence is the headstone beneath a tree in Cimarron's only cemetery. It states simply, "Killed in the County Seat War" and marks the final resting place of John Wesley English, the only casualty of a senseless and futile dispute sparked by the ambition of Asa T Soule. ■

The townspeople of Cimarron soon after the seat war. They refused to be intimidated by Soule's money or his hired guns. Kansas State Historical Society, Copy and Reuse Restrictions Apply.

Dear Cousin: We moved and in the mix-up my online name has become the above. Thank you for the info regarding family members. A recent book by Mark Kurlansky came to my attention recently. The title, "A Basque History of the World" seemed to indicate dry reading, but the map preceding page one brought me to attention. Before the French Revolution (1786 ?) There was a province named 'Soule' in southern France. It was one of the Basque provinces, three in France- four in Spain. (Three plus four equal one; was their motto.) Before that there may have been a Berber connection. Facial features, blood type, other clues are listed indicating possible ancestral connection. No wonder our roots become such a preoccupation. Why did the province get it's name? Are we descended from Cro-Magnon man?

We'll probably never know. Fraternaly, Bob
